Claire Allen is a multi-talented food entertainer, entrepreneur, and online content curator who has combined a successful career in marketing with a sincere and insatiable love of food, a passion which was really ignited after she competed in MasterChef South Africa in 2014.

The opportunity paved the way for Claire to become a sought-after celebrity chef on the local foodie scene. After the show finished, she combined her love for food and entertainment, launching her blog Food Is Love and a career as a food entertainer, taking to the stage both locally and abroad. This included headlining at The Good Food & Wine Show (SA's largest culinary event), and a stint as a weekly celebrity chef contributor to South Africa's popular daily entertainment programme - the Espresso breakfast show on SABC3.

Since 2014, Claire has taken her talents to the stage in the form of live demos at the Good Housekeeping Very Merry Xmas Event, Glad Family Day, Flora Blend Bar and Decorex. She honed her entertainment skills even further by conceptualising and producing Short Chef Skinny Chef (a live cooking demo show); acting as keynote speaker at the 2016 Liberty Life Women's Day event; and teaming up with the Mauritian Tourism Department to create a cooking stage at the WTM African exhibition. She has also collaborated with Bwell Food on a content creation project that included appearing in and producing over 52 videos that feature her own talents, as well as those of other Bwell chefs.

Claire isn't new to the limelight, she started helping out in the kitchen at a young age and has been in front of the camera since she was a teen. She presenting the then popular daily youth TV show Craz-E on ETV. The entrepreneurial bug bit her soon after, and she went on to launch a thriving events company, Signature Productions in her twenties.

For over a decade, Claire successfully created, managed and executed events and private functions for a variety of local and international businesses and celebrities. This included the launches of two internationally renowned whisky brands - Black Bottle Whisky and Bain's Cape Mountain Whisky. It was during this time that she discovered her affinity to establishing positive brand recognition, which has now become a pivotal part of her offering as a celebrity chef.

Claire spent three months in the UK in 2018, where she hosted Share a Taste of Home, a pop-up restaurant that inspired adventurous British diners and delighted South African expats with a taste of Mzansi in the form of South African classics like Bunny Chow, oxtail and mash, and Malay-inspired pickled fish. Her goal for the year ahead is to host more world-wide pop-up restaurants to introduce international audiences to the unique flavours of South African cuisine.

Claire plans to continue travelling, learning and extending her abilities to develop her foodie talent. With her ability to think out the box and make things happen, this dynamic, energetic and creative entrepreneur plans to show the world that anything is possible with enough determination.

Claire can provide the following services:

- Public speaking, MC & event hosting
- Brand ambassadorship & activations
- Cooking classes & demonstrations
- Pop-up restaurants & experiences
- Recipe and video production for online use & social media platforms
